Career Tip: The Ergonomics of Working from Home

In the midst of the new coronavirus pandemic, many of us now find ourselves working from home for the first time, full-time. We’ve transformed kitchen tables and bedrooms into temporary home offices. We’re managing with a chair that’s too low or a table that’s too high. Poor ergonomics can make or break your work-from-home experience. In this article, we’ll share some tips we’ve gathered to help make your work-from-home experience more ergonomic and productive. READ
